From the Department Head

It is my honor to introduce the faculty and staff of NMSU's Department of Extension Animal Sciences and Natural Resources. The abilities presented by our department to the constituents of New Mexico are comprehensive and informative. The cross-discipline nature of the department continues to enhance the ability of each specialist to address local, statewide, and regional issues facing the citizens of New Mexico.

Each specialist in the department has developed long-lasting relationships with the county office, agricultural industries, governmental agencies, and other institutions. The educational programming developed and delivered by the department directly addresses both youth and adult areas of interest and need. These educational programming efforts include equine science, dairy science, range science, forestry, aquatic issues, livestock science, economics, and policy initiatives. The depth and scope of the department's ability to address a broad array of interest areas to the state is unique in many aspects.

The primary role of specialists in the Department of Extension Animal Sciences and Natural Resources is to serve the needs of the counties across New Mexico through engagement with the local Extension office in each of New Mexico's 33 counties. The department continues to look forward to addressing the educational programming needs of the citizens of New Mexico. Please contact us about the needs in your area of New Mexico.
