- ◆ The importance of managing their own financial resources and making business decisions
- ◆ Proper animal care and livestock production practices
- ◆ The value of teamwork, good sportsmanship and competition

The 4-H Program

4-H is a non-formal, hands-on, practical educational program for youth. It is the Youth Development Program of the New Mexico State University Cooperative Extension Service. 4-H is where there is fun in learning and learning is fun!

4-H is for all youth, wherever they live in suburbs and cities, on farms and ranches. 4-H serves youth from all backgrounds and interests. It teaches both boys and girls through 4-H clubs, special interest groups, school enrichment groups, after school programs and more! Youth, ages 5-19, can join. Older members may be involved in special leadership, global education and recognition opportunities.

4-H is more than you ever imagined. From computers to citizenship, livestock to leadership, rabbits to rocketry- kids have fun exploring more than 200 projects on nearly any subject.
