

New Mexico State University is teaming up with Colorado State University and other surrounding states to seek input on the efficacy of ranch management planning.

Results will help with outreach efforts and program design of ranch management planning at the regional and state levels, for the benefit of your ranch and those groups supporting you. Too often, programs come to ranchers via national or university programs that may not match your needs and preferences. Here is your chance to have a voice and help guide programs to be more effective for conservation AND ranchers in your area.
